As we stand here tonight altogether We know the time has come to part;
And in spite of the joy and the gladness A sadness creeps into each heart.
Four years we have spent here together—Four years of work and of play,
And now we must leave our dear schoolmates And start on our journey down life's way.

Chorus
To our friends and our teachers so true
We must bid all a loving adieu, We shall never forget all your kindness.
Fond memories will ever be of you.
As we start out tonight on life's journey, May we to your teaching be true.
Though our childhood days are over We shall always be loyal to you.
As we go on our way we'll remember The good times we've had here with you.
Dear school, fellow classmates and teachers,
The class of '37 says adieu.

Mrs. Tibbetts Writes A Novel Of Aroostook

In her "Land Under Heaven," just issued this month by the Falmouth Book House of Monument Square, Portland, Pearl Ashby Tibbetts of Bethel has written an outstanding novel of the early days in Aroostook County. Based on an authentic historical background, beginning with the scenes of the bloodless Aroostook war, Mrs. Tibbetts shows a splendid sympathy with the sufferings and problems of the pioneer families. Her realistic portrayal of the growth of the potato industry, the intimate home life of the settlers and their ultimate success, makes the book a welcome change from the typical novel of today.

To quote from one review: "Through the pattern of events moves the life of one pioneer mother, Catharine. Side by side, with her tall and handsome English soldier husband, Catharine saw the wilderness fall before the blows of the axe, later to behold, where the forests had once stood, miles and miles of undulating potato crops. As a bride, Catharine went into the forest with her young lover, there to build a cabin, there to behold each day the fall of the great trees under the sturdy axe of her mate—afterwards to clear away the stumps and plant the first crops. Then the unheralded day when the first bushel of seed potatoes was planted in virgin ground. Brave Catharine, even in her dreams she did not visualize the opulence that was to bless her land from those same potatoes even in her own time and generations to come. . . . Many of the incidents are based on actual tales as told the author by her grandmother. Wife of a busy country doctor in Bethel, Maine, born and raised on an Aroostook farm, Pearl Ashby Tibbetts writes about a people whose traditions are her own."

Blinding Lights Cause Sunday Morning Crash

Only one person was slightly injured in a crash near the home of Bert Patterson on the Locke Mills road early Sunday morning. A Pontiac car owned and driven by Frank Morgan of Andover, was in collision with a Chevrolet driven by Percy Wilcox of Brownville. As a result both cars were badly damaged the Wilcox car was left crosswise the road and the Morgan car skidded into the bank near the Patterson residence. Accompanying Morgan were Norman Hall, Paul Dumas, Lynn Dumas, and Delbert Thurston, all of Andover. George Russell of Ashland and Horace Wilcox. The accident was investigated by Deputy F. A. Hunt.

Sir George Schuster, K.C.S.I., K.C.M.G., C.B.E., former Finance Minister of India, succeeds Sir Thomas Lipton.

NEW YORK CITY—The announcement has just been made at the general offices of Thos. J. Lipton, Inc., at Hoboken, N. J., that Sir George Schuster, K.C.S.I., K.C.M.G., C.B.E., former Finance Minister of India, was elected president of Thos. J. Lipton, Inc., succeeding the late Sir Thomas Lipton, famous tea merchant and yachtsman.

Sir George Schuster also announced, on boarding the Normandie to return to England, that Lipton, Ltd., of England, has purchased all the shares of Thos. J. Lipton, Inc., the American company, formerly held and operated as a separate company by the trustees of the Lipton estate. Sir George went on to say, however, that the management and personnel of the company in America would remain the same under the direction of W. W. Shannon, executive vice president and general manager.

In assuming the presidency of the American company, Sir George Schuster carries on Sir Thomas Lipton's work of international goodwill. "Never has there been a time," said Sir George, "when the strengthening of the economic ties between the United Kingdom and the United States of America has been more important to world peace than at present nor a time when the conditions toward effecting such a bond of goodwill have been more favorable. I personally welcome this new arrangement between the two Lipton companies, because it will give me a chance to visit your country more often and further my friendships and contacts on this side of the Atlantic."

Sir George is also Chairman of the Board of Directors of Lipton, Ltd., of England, holding important government posts for many years. Sir George served the Crown as Chancellor of the Exchequer of India and also as the reorganizer of the entire financial system of the Sudan. For these services he was knighted by the King. He is now Chairman of Allied Suppliers, Ltd., the largest chain store group in England, having under his direction over 4,500 stores, 27,000 employees, and a yearly business turnover of over $250,000,000. He is a director of Westminster Bank, a member of the Colonial Advisory Committee and Chairman of the Unemployment Assistance Board.

He graduated from Oxford in 1903. The reunion of the two Lipton companies will, Sir George says, result in several advantages to the American company. Arrangements will be made to ship tea direct to America from the Lipton Tea Estates in Ceylon and the expert organization of tea buyers and tea blenders of Lipton, Ltd., of England, will now be available to the American company. The Canadian company, Thomas Lipton of Canada, Ltd., is wholly owned by the American company.

"We look forward to a rapid increase in tea drinking in the United States," the new president said. "We have already noted a definite trend with the American buying public to preferring the better grades of tea."

"There is vast room for increased sales here," Sir George continued, pointing out that the per capita consumption of tea per year is as follows:

7 lb per person in the United States.

4.0 lb per person in Canada.

3.0 lb per person in England.

Thos. J. Lipton, Inc., therefore proposes to intensify its sales efforts in America and substantially increase its advertising appropriation here. "We believe in newspaper advertising which represents the bulk of our advertising expenditures, as we think that newspapers are the most effective and best controlled method of promotion we know," said Sir George.

Liptons now has the largest sales in this country of any internationally known brand of tea and it is believed that this campaign will substantially increase its position in the market.

"The workers on both sides of the Atlantic are happy to be working together again," concluded Sir George, "and we all rejoice in preserving the name of that great merchant and sportsman, Sir Thomas Lipton."

Service is an important factor in the operation of a store. Stocks of goods are kept on hand and customers' needs anticipated by the successful merchant. More than that he is expected to be able to obtain desired items on short notice and to give needed data and advice. Only when your merchant is unable to render these services is one justified in trading elsewhere.

You can help yourself by buying at home.

Episcopal Bishop And College President Endorse Good Will Farm's Appeal For Aid

May 24, 1937
The appeal for help for the Good Will Farm at Hinckley, Maine, ought to meet with an immediate and generous response. For nearly half a century this institution, the outgrowth of the vision of the Rev.
George W. Hinckley, has trained in a wholesome atmosphere boys and girls unfortunately deprived of the care experienced in normal family life. A visit to the Good Will Farm is a richly rewarding experience.
You see there what good work is done when sympathy and a philanthropic purpose are allied with an intelligent understanding of the needs of youth. In that environment, contributing to health of soul and body, boys and girls are being built up in character, in book knowledge, and in practical handicrafts, all making for good citizenship and usefulness in society. Let it not come to pass that this good work should be impaired for lack of funds. The State of Maine can ill afford the loss in human values which a curtailment of the work of Good Will Farm would involve.

Benjamin Brewster
Episcopal Bishop of Maine
Portland, Maine

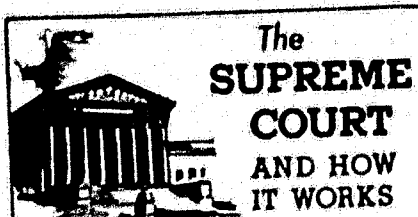

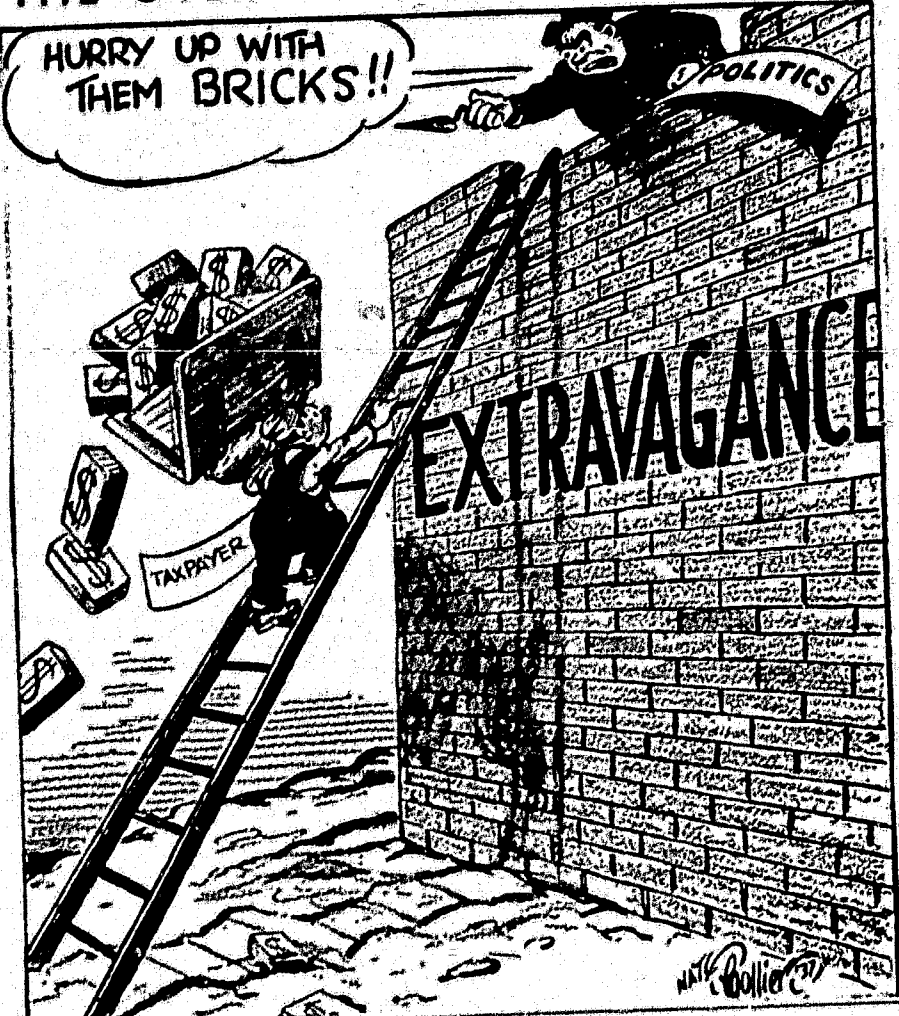

May 22, 1937
The Good Will Farm is one of the most useful and finest institutions in the State of Maine. As President of Bowdoin College I have had many opportunities to know at first hand of the valuable work done under the inspiring direction of Dr. Hinckley and his son.
Here at the college we have had a number of boys who have been trained at Good Will. They include the first Rhodes Scholar from Maine and many others who have made a fine contribution to the colleges as undergraduates and have done splendid work in the world outside.
I know that the people of the State of Maine will rally to its support when they realize the very great need of more funds. Like all other institutions that depend entirely or in part on invested endowment, the returns of course are less, while expenses remain static or, with increase in the cost of living, mount.
It would be a calamity indeed if the work of this splendid institution should have to be curtailed.

President of Bowdoin College

"Jacking," Hunting, Fishing

"Jacking" was a form of night hunting and fishing formerly much used, but now generally discountenanced by American sportsmen and forbidden by statute to most of the United States. Jacking deer was done from a raft or canoe. A light which could be concealed until needed was used. This was arranged in the bow of the craft and when flashed suddenly at an animal would cause it to stand still from terror or curiosity. Similar devices are used at night to lure fish to the surface where they are speared.

THE OVERWORKED HOD-CARRIER

The Need for an Umpire
By ROBERT MERRILL

THE men who in 1787 drafted the Constitution of the United States had two great advantages in establishing a government that sought to assure personal liberty.

In the first place, they had vivid personal recollections of the despotism of King George III. In the second place, they knew from bitter experience the weakness of the first government which they had set up to take the place of the repudiated King.

Having renounced a one-man government that was unjust because too strong, they had suffered under another—established by the Articles of Confederation—equally unjust because it was too weak. Their problem was to frame a constitution under which the people of each state should be protected against any attempt of federal officials to become tyrants, while at the same time making it impossible for the several states to cripple or hamper the central government.

Thus it came about that the very people who had actually suffered both from too much government and from too little were best fitted to find the safety-point half way between.

Some Early Weaknesses.

Illustrations of the despotism which they feared are effectively recited in the Declaration of Independence. Among the many despotic acts there charged may be found, for example: that "he has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary Powers."

On the other hand, among the many weaknesses which made the Articles of Confederation a failure, the following is a typical illustration:

During the Revolutionary war, vessels of war, called privateers, had been fitted out by citizens of the several colonies and sent out to prey upon British commerce. A British sloop, the Active, had been seized by citizens of Connecticut who were bringing her into port as prize when an American privateer, the Convention, which had been fitted out in Pennsylvania, captured the Active and claimed the prize money which belonged to the men from Connecticut.

A Pennsylvania court decided the case in favor of the home claimants and awarded them the greater part of the prize money, but, upon appeal to a court which the feeble Articles of Confederation had set up, the rights of the Connecticut claimants were properly recognized and the judgment of the Pennsylvania court was reversed.

Decision Not Backed.

Then, to their dismay, the victorious Connecticut men discovered that the order of the court was not worth the paper it was written on, because Pennsylvania refused to recognize or enforce it and the central government was without power to enforce the order of its own court.

Conferences followed between a committee of congress and the general assembly of Pennsylvania; but nothing was accomplished.

As soon, however, as the Constitution of the United States was adopted federal courts were set up, with the Supreme court of the United States at their head; and the federal government was given power to enforce their decrees. Accordingly, after having waited years for such an outcome, the men from Connecticut were able to bring suit in a United States district court to enforce the order formerly made in their favor but subsequently disregarded.

The district court granted partial but not complete relief; but, upon appeal, the Supreme court of the United States finally did complete justice among the parties.

Court Stands on Own Feet.

With such experiences immediately behind them the framers of the Constitution were naturally careful to make rules to prevent their recurrence. It was obviously insufficient, however, merely to make the rules: it was essential that there should be a judicial umpire to interpret and apply them. Accordingly the Constitution safeguarded the judicial power of the United States by vesting it "in one Supreme court."

With our form of government the Supreme court cannot be abolished by the congress or by the President any more than the congress or the President can be abolished by the court. Remembering that the king of Great Britain had made judges here "dependent on his will alone for the tenure of their offices and the amount and payment of their salaries," the framers were careful to provide that "the judges, both of the Supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good Behaviour, and shall, at stated Times, receive for their Services, a Compensation which shall not be diminished during their Continuance in Office."

While, therefore, the men of 1787 were not super-men they were people whose actual experiences made them think of many safeguards of liberty which otherwise might have been overlooked.

"It is impossible to miss the fact that the Democratic party, so united in 1932 and so overwhelmingly triumphant in 1936, is now split from stem to stern," wrote Frank Kent, recently in a syndicated column.
Most of the other political commentators have also been discussing this situation.

Superficially, cause of the split was the judicial reorganization proposal, which alienated many Democratic senators and representatives from the Administration.
But the matter goes deeper than that. A split has been brewing for a long time—even before the last election. Congressmen were becoming restive, even though they didn't say so publicly, under what they regarded as too much bossing.
They were losing their liking for having major bills written by presidential advisors with minor official jobs instead of by senators or representatives. They began to frown at White House "must" orders.

It is likely that if the Republicans had made any kind of a showing in 1936, the Democratic split would never have occurred. When a party's majority is slim and the going is hard, it sticks together from sheer necessity. But now, with Republican representation in both branches at all-time lows, and with the Democratic majority so overwhelming, Congressmen are speaking their minds and airing resentments and differences.

This is seen in other matters than the Supreme Court bill. In the past, Mr. Roosevelt has always obtained appropriations on a blank check basis—that is, Congress voted the money requested, with the proviso that it be spent at the President's discretion. This session White House effort to avoid having a substantial portion of relief funds earmarked (specifically allocated to certain projects) has failed, and seems to have little chance of succeeding in the future.
And some of the most biting criticism of the President has come from Democrats.

The potential repercussions that can follow this are unpredictable.
It is no longer regarded as unlikely that the Democratic party will become permanently divided into two camps, roughly classified as "conservative" and "radical," and that a new political alignment and new political party will result.

To quote Mr. Kent again, "Mr.
Farley... insists that support of Mr. Roosevelt's Supreme Court issue is a question of party loyalty, which clearly is designed to read opposing Democrats out of the party." Next year a number of promient Democratic senators come up for reelection who have lately shown disinclination to follow the White House lead. Writing in Collier's, George Creel, who is perhaps closer to the President than any other newspaperman, asserts that Mr. Roosevelt will oppose these men and use his power to beat them in the primaries. The list includes Senators Wheeler, Burke, Byrd, King, Gerry and Tydings. All of them, with the exception of Senator Wheeler, belong to the conservative wing of the party. Senator Wheeler has always been regarded as a liberal (he ran for vice-president on La Fol-lette's 1924 independent ticket, favors government ownership of railroads and power systems, etc.) but the fact that he led the opposition to the court proposal has put him in the Administration dog house.

So there is talk now—and it comes from informed inexcitable circles—that some sort of a political coalition between defecting Democrats and the remains of the Republicans is an imminent possibility. Under any circumstances, a cleavage in the majority party has occurred, and it can't be closed with words. There is too much at stake, and too many deeply opposed philosophies, for all the Democrats to continue to live peacefully under the same party banner. This has happened in the past with the Republicans, and it contributed in large measure to the Republican rout, but it has never happened to the Democrats in post Civil War history.

The 1937 farm market will prove the richest since the war, says Business Week. Gain over 1936 is anticipated at 10% or more—which means a rise of close to $800,000,000 for a total of more than $8,500,000,000. Agriculture's high occurred in 1929, with an income of almost $10,500,000,000; its low in 1932—$4,328,000,000.

This year's increase will be the result of several factors: 1. Larger harvests in most crops; 2. Heavier consumer demand, due to better times; 3. Governmental benefits; 4.
Shortage in livestock, which will be reflected in higher prices.

No business news of moment has appeared lately. Most industries, when seasonal adjustment is made, are doing well. Construction continues to rise, particularly in the domestic field. Sales of electrical equipment, air-conditioning units and similar articles are thus on the up.

The price picture is relatively unchanged. It is believed that there will be major advances this year in a few fields, but not in all by any means.

A new cooperative bull association has been formed by Ayrshire breeders in the Androscoggin dairy herd improvement association. This is the third now operating in Maine.

Oxford Colby Men To Assist Memorial Project

ROBERTS MEMORIAL UNION

Architect's drawing of the men's social union building which Colby College alumni plan to erect on the new Mayflower Hill campus of this college. More than 75% of the $300,000 needed for this purpose has already been raised and the Colby men of Maine are organizing to raise the balance. (Inset): The late President Arthur J. Roberts, for whom the building will be named.

Colby College alumni of Oxford County have organized to do their share in the proposal to build a memorial to the late president Arthur J. Roberts as one of the buildings on Colby's new Mayflower Hill campus.

A large proportion of the Colby men in this county were present at a Roberts Memorial dinner held at Auburn, Wednesday evening. They heard President Franklin D. Johnson of Colby describe the men's union which the Colby Alumni Council has undertaken to erect. He stated that this building will contain dining accommodations for all the men students, recreation and game rooms, offices for student publications and societies, infirmary, guest rooms, quarters for the bachelor faculty members, and many other facilities. It will be about 200 feet in length and constructed in the Georgian style with red brick and white trim.

The Colby President said, "This building will be one of the finest students unions among the small colleges of the country and will have an important part in raising the student life in Colby to the highest possible cultural and moral plane."

The cost is estimated at $360,000 and over 75% of this has already been subscribed by Colby men outside the State of Maine, and the alumni committees in this state are trying to secure pledges for the remaining $75,000 before the Commencement Alumni Luncheon on June 19.

President Johnson told the group that "Up to now every area in which this appeal has been made to the Colby alumni has subscribed its full quota and if this record is maintained, the success of the program is assured."

The Androscoggin-Oxford Committee for the Roberts Memorial Fund is under the chairmanship of Dr. Arthur Jordan '95 of Auburn, and among those who have enlisted to serve on this committee are the following from Oxford County:

Robert B. Dow '20, Norway; Charles Dwyer '08, Hebron; Dexter E. Elsemore '30, Dixfield; Arthur L. Field '05, Hebron; Walter L. Gray '95, South Paris; Louis A. Hammond '04, Rumford; Fred W. Rowell '14, Norway; and Clair E. Wood '28, South Paris.

Oxford County United Parish

We want you to make no mistake about the Sunday services. Mr. Gledhill is taking the next two Sundays as part of his vacation. Therefore there will be some rearrangement of the schedule for next Sunday. Service will be at Waterford at the usual hour of 10 a. m. At Center Lovell, the service will be at 10 also. At North Waterford there will be a Children's Day Concert at 11. At Stoneham, the time remains unchanged, 11.15. There will be no Service at Albany, except Sunday School at 10.30.

On the following Sunday, Albany will more than make up for the loss of their service this week. For on the 20th of June, Mr. Merrill and the Thirteen Class is expected to be at Albany. On that Sunday, the services will be omitted in the other places, to give all a chance to go to Albany.

Under the leadership of the Oxford County Farm Bureau on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, June 15-18, a Recreation Institute will be held at the Wilkins House, Waterford. A nationally known teacher of dramatics, Miss Hobbs, will be with us to show us the method of staging plays. The number is limited, but if any are interested will you please send your name at once to one of the Staff or to Mr. Blanchard, at the Farm Bureau Office, South Paris.

On Wednesday evening you will find a good supper waiting for you at East Stoneham. For Friday you will have to go a little farther along on Route Five--to Center Lovell. There you will find another good meal spread before you.

On Sunday night of this week the people of the Parish, all are invited young and old--to the Wilkins House; will have the opportunity of hearing Miss Mabel Gage tell of her work with the Blind. Mrs. Gage will also have some valuable suggestions for those who like to swim and dive, for the prevention of injury to the ears.

Man, 127, Weds Wife No. 7

To celebrate his one hundred twenty-seventh birthday Hassan, a peasant living near Bigha, in the Dardanelles Straits, married for the seventh time. His bride is only thirty-seven. Hassan declares that a man is never too old to marry. Enjoying perfect health, a good appetite and the use of a new set of natural teeth, which first started to grow 10 years ago, he does not look older than seventy. He walks several times a week from his village to the neighboring town of Bigha to buy his groceries. Hassan hopes to live at least another 20 years and attributes his fitness to his life in the open and his total abstinence from liquor and tobacco.

Class Ode
The day has come of which we've long been dreaming; These happy school days now for us are done;
For each, Adventure's star is brightly gleaming; One race is finished, one has just begun.

Chorus:
Dear Gould, amid the purple hills of Bethel, Our life, our love, our guiding star are you;
And for you we have none but fondest memories,
And wishes for our sacred gold and blue.

Off we'll recall the glad days spent together Beneath your elms and your golden domes; May we bring credit to you, Alma Mater;
May you be proud of where'er we roam.

If wealth and fame should prove to be elusive, Our memories fond will often turn to you.
Your sheltering arms, your teachers kind and helpful, Our happy days beneath your gold and blue.
